Governor's Foreword

The

he New York State Council on the Arts has had a tremendous impact on the growth of New York's non-profit cultural arts community for the last 25 years. The Council has played a pivotal role in developing an interest in the cultural arts as well as supporting the establishment of cultural organizations and activities.

From its beginnings the Council has sought to dispel the notion that the arts are the domain of a privileged few. The Council wisely knew the value of access to the arts and took the arts to the people, bringing them live music, theatre and ballet presented by some of our most gifted artists. The Council extended its early support to local art and history museums as well as traveling exhibitions. Today, the Council offers grants in the areas of Architecture, Dance, Film, Literature, Local Arts Organizations/Service Organizations, Media, Museum Aid, Music, Presenting Organizations, Special Arts Services, Theatre, Visual Artists, and two programs designed to encourage local government support of the arts: Decentralization and LIFT.

As it begins its second quarter century it is a mature Council on the Arts that strives to connect the people with the artist and his work. Initiatives have been taken to expand the access that our young people have to the arts and museums. In 1985 my administration recommended, and the Legislature approved, an allocation for arts in education. Under this program eligible nonprofit cultural organizations may apply for funds if they collaborate with an educational institution. The goal is to develop a partnership between the cultural and educational community and provide support for collaborative programs that involve artists, students, teachers, cultural organizations and educational institutions.

Our state is blessed with many diverse heritages. Our people come from backgrounds of different religions, languages, customs and geographical locations. These groups are rich in artistic traditions that have been handed down for generations. Dance, music, oral literature, visual arts, crafts and drama are the cornerstones of our heritage and the links with our past. Recognizing the importance of folk arts the Council created a special program in 1985/86 to preserve, develop and share these treasures within our state with the family of New York.

Under the able leadership of Chairman Kitty Carlisle Hart, the New York State Council on the Arts has worked passionately for this State. The Council helps to bring the wonder, dreams and beauty of the arts to us and helps maintain our state's position as the cultural center of the nation.

Mario M. Cuomo
Governor

Chairman's Review

Last year was the beginning of a new quarter century for the Council. As the largest state arts agency in the nation, the Council began the year with a record breaking budget of $40,300,000. As Governor Cuomo has noted, the Council is able to move firmly ahead into its second quarter century.

The Council received requests for assistance from 1,855 organizations in the 1985/86 funding cycle, and awarded support to 1,381 groups. We were pleased that our support aided an ever increasing number of quality arts activities.

The Council's new Arts-in-Education Program has completed its first year, awarding a total of $2 million. This initiative, suggested by Governor Cuomo in 1984/85, brought in requests from 332 organizations around the State of which 217 were funded. The Council is extremely proud of this new collaboration with the New York State Education Department, and we look forward to continued growth and partnerships between education and the arts benefitting our State's young people.

The second year of the New York Foundation for the Arts' Artists' Fellowship Program, was a high water mark for fellowship support for individual artists. At this point, the New York Foundation for the Arts is the largest nonprofit provider of direct grants and services to individual artists of all disciplines in this country. The Council hopes that this achievement is only the beginning of the kind of support that New York State artists can look forward to in the future.

Our Architecture, Planning and Design Program has just completed a new project—an architectural competition called Inner City Infill: A Housing Design Competition for Harlem. The competition was initiated by the Council to develop affordable housing in Harlem which responds to the needs of the existing community while demonstrating architectural excellence.

In Music, the Council held a New Music Network tour for the second time. This tour is intended to present a wide variety of current music-making, to provide repeat performances of new works, to open new performance spaces for contemporary music and to develop new audiences. The Council is gratified by the success of this project, and looks forward to the continued growth and appreciation of American music.

The Governor again hosted the Governor's Arts Awards in a gala ceremony and reception held in Albany at the Empire State Institute for the Performing Arts. Governor Cuomo's third year as host of these awards is testimony to his commitment to the importance of the arts in our lives. Fellow New Yorkers were again able to view the awards ceremony over Public Television Stations with the cooperation of the New York Network.

Each of the Council's programs has carried on the tradition of supporting and nurturing the very best that there is in the arts in New York State. I would like to applaud the remarkable efforts of the staff members in their efforts to assist artists and arts organizations. They continue to exhibit sensitivity in their fields and have devised new means of support in response to changing conditions. Our peer panelists continue to provide the balance, insight, and good judgement that our review system needs in order to remain in the forefront of public funding for the arts. My fellow board members remain constant in giving their time and hard work and it is most deeply appreciated.

I am, as always, proud and appreciative of the fact that New York State is blessed with a Governor and a Legislature that work toward maintaining New York State as the arts capital of the world. And, I am deeply grateful to the citizens of the Empire State for their support of government funding for the arts.

As the Council moves into its second quarter century, it has already begun to think and plan for the future. The Council has decided to focus on how the changes in society around us affect the arts, how our audiences are changing, and what we and the State's arts organizations can do to accommodate these changes. And too, the Council plans to direct more of its energies toward long-range planning for the future, so that we can continue to respond to and anticipate the needs of our growing and changing constituency.

Executive Director's Statement

For the arts in New York State, as well as for the New York State Council on the Arts, 1985/86 was a very good year. The pages that precede and follow proclaim a multitude of achievements in fostering artistic excellence and wider public accessibility. The importance of 1985/86 cannot, however, be measured solely by the activities chronicled within these pages, for it was also a year of reflection. The Council began its second quarter century with a sense of pride and satisfaction in its prior accomplishments. Reviewing these 25 years, however, prompted the Council to consider the future, with the year 2000 looming on the not so distant horizon.

The artistic landscape of this State has changed dramatically over the past 25 years. What was once an innovative program and method of disbursing public funds is now firmly established. What were once fledgling artistic ventures are now admired organizations. Artistic activity has been developed in the nooks and crannies of this, the Empire State.

And yet the future beckons. It is time to take stock. What is the Council's appropriate role in maintaining New York's leadership of the arts in this country? Are the Council's past methods of operation appropriate to the future in its efforts to serve

New York's diverse arts community? Does the Council have responsibilities that go beyond only ensuring a fair and respected disbursement of public funds? How does the Council approach its mission of increasing each citizen's accessibility to valuable artistic experiences when the demographics of the State are perceptibly changing and new technologies are affecting every aspect of our lives? How should the Council be fostering artistic excellence and encouraging the finest artists to come to and remain in New York?

1985/86 prompted the Council to realize that it must consider implications over the longer term and its role in insuring that the arts are a pivotal part of the State's future. Over the next months the Council will begin a dialogue with the arts community and the public on the Council's future role in assisting the arts in this State. This participation in the process is essential as the complexity of the issues before us requires concerted efforts to achieve solutions.

In the meantime, all of the citizens of this State should take comfort in the assembled group of dedicated individuals, from Council members, to panelists, to staff, that serve the State and the arts with unsurpassable skill. The fruits of this labor are enumerated before you.

Highlights of Program Funding Activities

ARCHITECTURE, PLANNING AND DESIGN PROGRAM

rchitecture, Planning and Design Program awards totaling $1,065,000 were made to 112 organizations and communities across

New York State in 1985/86. The Program continued its tradition of supporting both public awareness activities about the built environment and actual design and planning work. Monies were awarded in the fields of architecture, architectural history, historic preservation, landscape architecture, urban and rural planning, architectural photography, and urban design. In addition, two proactive projects were sponsored by the Architecture Program: a major design competition and a series of statewide workshops.

An increased amount of unrestricted general operating support ($404,370) was awarded to 21 organizations offering programmatic activities and services in the design fields. Several of these groups took advantage of two-year funding. The Architectural League of New York, Prospect Park Environmental Center, and the Landmark Society of Western New York all received increased ongoing support to meet their expanding needs.

With 62% or $660,630 of its total allocation, the Architecture Program funded an extremely diverse selection of exhibits, design studies, feasibility and adaptive use studies, publications, surveys, workshops, etc. Projects as varied and as far flung as a lecture series on historic preservation sponsored by the Washington County Historical Society, the Preservation Coalition of Erie County's publication on industrial architecture in Buffalo, and an urban design study of the buildings facing Union Square undertaken by the 14th Street/Union Square Local Development Corporation were supported. These are testaments to a remarkably high level of activity in the design arts reaching citizens in every corner of the Empire State.

In an effort to reach wider audiences, priority for project funding was given to film and video production. Two noteworthy projects were: an individual artist's Walk Around Aalto which depicts the Norwegian architect Alvar Aalto's architectural projects worldwide, and RESTORE's video on masonry restoration techniques for the building trades. The sum of $59,676 was spent in these two categories, which represents a dramatic increase over the 1984/85 funding level and indicates that quality films and videos can effectively explain the intricacies of architecture and design to general audiences.

The Architecture Program also continued priority funding for its five Design Issues of Special Concern. These themes were developed to stimulate projects addressing concerns considered vital to the state of design in New York. The topics in 1985/86 were Contemporary Architecture and Design, Main Street Revitalization, Regional Architecture and Design, the Rural Landscape, and Waterfront Development. In all, 57 requests addressing these themes were submitted and $115,600 was spent on 26 projects. Among the many exemplary projects were the Museum of Holography's exploration of the uses of holography in architecture, a facade design study for downtown Auburn undertaken by that city's Planning Board, and a traveling architectural history exhibit on eleven Syracuse architects sponsored by the Preservation Association of Central New York.

Special Projects, another incentive for seminal or prototypical efforts, was introduced in 1985/86. In this area the Program made a commitment to increase support for endeavors which by their innovative or experimental nature would have a significant impact upon the design fields. Four projects were funded for a total of $44,530. Rochester Institute of Technology's development of a videodisc archive of graphic design images was typical of the caliber and potential impact of these prototypical efforts.

Institutional Development was a new funding category introduced by the Architecture Program during 1985/86. Developed as a response to a critical need for administrative support for developing organizations, funds were awarded on a matching basis for the salary of a principal staff member. Both the Landmark Society of Broome County, which has been running programs on an all volunteer basis, and the Hudson-Mohawk Industrial Gateway in Troy took advantage of this new opportunity.

Finally, the Architecture Program brought two of its own projects to fruition during the 1985/86 funding year. The Inner City Infill Competition, a major national design competition for low- and moderate-income housing in Harlem, drew 74 entries. The winning design by a team of two architecture firms — Michael Pyatok Associates of Oakland, California, and William Vitto and Ira Oaklander of New York City — was selected after a two-stage judging process and successfully interprets the goals of the competition: to elicit quality in contemporary design, to encourage fresh approaches to the challenges of inner city housing, and to promote the conceptualization of socially responsible and prototypical design solutions. In the year 1986/87, a traveling exhibition highlighting the winning entries and a seminar will be important educational efforts to disseminate the competition's results. Simultaneously a strong effort will be made to encourage the construction of the winning design. The second pro-active project was the Demonstration-Networking Tour — a series of four workshops which featured successful projects funded by the Architecture Program. This endeavor's goal was to provide a forum in which individuals could learn from exemplary efforts, discuss common concerns, and share resources. Two topics were addressed: cultural facilities renovation and children's architectural education programs. Over 160 individuals interested in developing their own buildings or programs attended the sessions in Port Jefferson, New York City, Albany and Rochester. In the forthcoming year, this effort will focus on Main Street Revitalization projects.

ARTS-IN-EDUCATION PROGRAM

During 1985/86 the Council, in collaboration with the New York State Education Department, planned and implemented a $2,000,000 Arts-in-Education Initiative. The primary goal of this Initiative is to develop sustained partnerships between the educational and cultural community for the benefit of children in pre-kindergarten through twelfth grade. In order to accomplish this the Council worked closely with two offices of the New York State Education Department: the Office of Cultural Education and the Office of Elementary, Secondary and Continuing Education.

Nonprofit cultural or environmental organizations were eligible to apply to the Council for arts-in-education activities if they did so in partnership with an educational institution(s). Individual schools are not eligible to apply for Council funds as the Council is prohibited by the Legislature from funding schools directly.

Organizations from 45 of the State's 62 counties submitted 332 requests for funding. Of these, 217 were funded at an average grant of $9200. The total amount requested was $5,226,583. The five funding categories were Collaborative Programs, Planning and Development, Commissions/Sponsored Projects, Professional Consultants and Special Projects. The Council funded up to 50% of the project costs. As collaborating partners, public schools, colleges and BOCES (Boards of Cooperative Educational Services) contributed funds toward these arts-in-education projects.

In the category of Collaborative Programs, 106 requests were funded for a total of $1,292,450. Nine organizations received multi-year funding. This category was designed for organizations with at least a two-year track record of successful school partnerships. Applicants were required to have demonstrated extensive planning and could apply for either single or multi-year support. A grant to BACA/The Brooklyn Arts Council will support their Adopt A Landmark program in thirteen junior high and high schools in Brooklyn. This interdisciplinary program uses local history to teach visual arts, architecture, history and social studies. The Metropolitan Opera Association received a grant for its collaborative program Opera from the Inside Out with Manhattan Community School District 6. The Paul Robeson Performing Arts Company, another recipient in this category will collaborate with elementary students in the Syracuse schools in the Creative Art for Language Skills Development Project. This program for elementary children in grades one to four includes classroom experience in creative dramatics, in-service teacher workshops and fully-staged theatrical performances by the Paul Robeson Company.

In the category of Planning and Development, 78 requests were funded for a total of $440,523. Organizations were funded to plan and develop meaningful arts-in-education activities or services. The collaborating parties planned and/or piloted programs for delivery in school districts in their geographic area. Some of the funded projects are: a grant to the Brooklyn Museum to develop museum programs for New York City high school students with special needs; Essex Community Heritage Organization, to plan and pilot a North Country architectural heritage program with five school systems in Essex County; Mt. Vernon Fine Arts Cultural Center, to develop a program to integrate the performing arts with language arts in the Mt. Vernon school system; and the New York Botanical Garden to develop instructional videotapes that are researched, performed and taped by students of Community School District 10 in the Bronx. The subject of the tapes will be the Northeast Forest and its relationship to man.

Four organizations were awarded a total of $31,000 to develop art that relates to children in the category of Commissions/Sponsored Projects. Two commissions were for choreographers to create new work with children; one award was for a music-theatre work developed with children and the fourth award, an adaptation of a play for study by teachers and students for aesthetic education. While there were few applications in this category during the first funding cycle, the Council anticipates considerable growth in this area as more organizations and artists in partnership with educational institutions begin to address the need for new art to be appreciated by children.

Of the six requests in the Professional Consultants category, three were funded for a total of $44,700. One organization was funded to deliver technical assistance to the arts-in-education field and two to engage professional consultants to solve problems and improve their activities.

There were 26 organizations funded in the category of Special Projects for a total of $191,327. This category was established for projects that do not meet the requirements of the other funding categories but which relate to the particular unique activities provided by an organization. Some examples include: a grant to Hallwalls to administer a visiting lecture series in the Buffalo city schools in the subject areas of art, media and architecture; the Joyce Theatre for their dance education program developed jointly with the New York City Board of Education; and Dutchess County Arts Council to perform a county-wide survey on arts-in-education programs and resources, the results to be disseminated and discussed at an arts council sponsored conference for the county's constituents.

DANCE PROGRAM

Twenty-five years ago, when the New York City Ballet performed at the Empire State Festival at Bear Mountain, a new age of public funding and recognition for dance and the performing arts began. This was the occasion of the Council's first support for a performing arts event. The ensuing years have brought with them unparalleled growth and change, and challenge too, for both the Council and the vast and artistically rich dance constituency that it serves. The Council's Dance Program, in 1985/86, once again sought to address some of the present challenges, by awarding a total of $3,195,000 in support to 104 dance organizations under 11 funding categories tailored to current needs. Noteworthy developments were the inclusion of one new funding category, Building Ballet Repertory, and the expansion of another, Performance and Rehearsal Space. Both categories attempted to counterbalance two growing trends in the field, respectively, a noticeable lack of new choreography using the classical ballet vocabulary, and the increasing difficulties faced by dance companies in securing affordable rehearsal space. Other categories addressed areas no less important.

The largest share of the Dance Program's allocation was awarded under the category of Professional Performances — Home Base: 68 dance companies received a total of $1,582,500. Major engagements by the American Ballet Theatre (Ballet Theatre Foundation), Dance Theatre of Harlem, Joffrey Ballet (Foundation for the Joffrey Ballet), Feld Ballet (Original Ballets Foundation), Martha Graham Dance Company and Paul Taylor Dance Company were assisted. The same category, which accounted for 50% of all program funding, helped to support performance seasons by a host of traditional modern and contemporary dance companies, ballet companies, and ethnic, historical and theatrical dance ensembles.

The New York City Ballet, Dance Theater Workshop and Merce Cunningham Dance Company were among the 16 organizations receiving general operating support in 1985–86, which totalled $983,500. Support under the category was directed, in each case, to ongoing institutional activities without reference to specific projects. However, a criterion in the consideration of these requests was a demonstrated history of paying artists' salaries or fees, consistent with the Program's long-standing commitment to improve levels of compensation for dancers.

Outside Manhattan, the Berkshire Ballet (Albany), Buffalo Ballet Theatre, Bucket Dance Theater (Rochester) and Rondo Dance Theater (Bedford) were among the recipients of awards to assist with home-season appearances. Most of them were also among the 18 organizations receiving $89,485 in commissioning funds to assist with the fees of choreographers to restage, or create, a total of 27 works. A list of choreographers and commissioning organizations appears on page 163.

The Long-Range Development category saw continuing support, totalling $67,000, of three organizations which entered the second year of three-year projects individually designed to spur artistic and administrative growth, without the need to mount an annual performance season: Dance Solos Inc. (Annabelle Gamson, Artistic Director); the Jose Limon Dance Foundation; and the Trisha Brown Dance Company.

Touring support was covered by two funding categories. Two organizations, the Harvest Dance Foundation (Rosalind Newman and Dancers) and the Twyla Tharp Dance Foundation, received a total of $81,000 under the category Long-Term Residence in New York State. With support placed towards dancers' salaries and administrative costs, Rosalind Newman and Dancers carried out a four-week residency at the Lake Placid Center for Music, Drama and Art during the Summer, 1985; the Twyla Tharp Dance Company's residency encompassed a period of seven weeks during the Spring, 1986, at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs. Both residencies realized essential goals of the funding category: the building of audiences for upstate dance events and a sustained period of creative rehearsal time. Within the funding category of Professional Performances — Touring, six dance companies received support totalling $38,000 for upstate performances, among them the Cycle Arts Foundation (Blondell Cummings) and the Red Wing Performing Group (Stephanie Skura).

Elsewhere, the Dance Program again recognized the crucial provision of vital administrative and archival projects under its Services to the Field category, with the New York Public Library's Dance Collection and the Dance Notation Bureau receiving awards for documentation, and Pentacle Management (Danceworks) funded for its program of administrative services, as a few such examples.

Four dance organizations received awards totalling $68,750 under the Dance Program's newest funding category, Incentive Support: Building Ballet Repertory: Ballet Theatre Foundation; Chamber Ballet U.S.A.; Foundation for the Joffrey Ballet; and the New York City Hispanic-American Dance Company (Ballet Hispanico). The category was designed to offer new opportunities to young and developing choreographers to create ballets employing a classical vocabulary in a workshop setting where access to skilled dancers was assured over a specially scheduled period of time. Here, the emphasis was placed on "process" over "product."

Under the expanded category, Performance and Rehearsal Space, six organizations received support, amounting to $18,000, to assist with the provision of no less than 5,000 hours of partially subsidized rehearsal space. The intention of the award was to help alleviate a critical and growing need for affordable rehearsal space — a matter of particular significance in metropolitan centers such as New York City where real estate values have escalated. The assisted organizations were: Danceworks; the Ethnic Folk Arts Center; Friends of the Davis Center; Institute for Art and Urban Resources (P.S. 1); the Just Above Midtown Gallery; and the Latin-American Workshop.

In other funding categories, six organizations received a total of $19,000 for Administrative Salaries, to assist with projects that stabilized or expanded upon management, and $4,000 was awarded under the category of Publications.

Finally, given the rich diversity of dance companies so variously served by the Dance Program's funding categories, there seemed to be strong confirmation of the wisdom and foresight of those who set out to found the Council on the Arts twenty-five years ago.

DECENTRALIZATION PROGRAM

In 1985/86 the Decentralization Program completed its eighth year of arts funding at the local level. Thirty-two regrant agencies — arts councils, county governments, regional advisory panels and a library system — administer the local Decentralization Programs. These thirty-two agencies serve 46 of the State's 62 counties.

Each local agency establishes its own decision-making process, according to the Council's guidelines, for the review of applications from community arts organizations. The Decentralization Program creates a partnership between the State and local arts agencies that extends to more than providing funds. In addition, Decentralization makes an effort to serve, identify, and nurture developing arts organizations and cultural activities on the local level.

The Decentralization Program allocation for 1985/86 was $903,000. Thirty-two Decentralization regrant agencies received a total of $2,401,712 in requests for support of artists' fees and a wide variety of local cultural activities in every discipline. Local panels and boards of directors reviewed 1,055 applications. Of these, 752 grants were awarded. The average request was $2,129, and the average grant, $1,027. Over one third of the applications represent new requests to the local Decentralization programs.

The Council hopes that within the next two years, the remaining 16 counties of the State will be interested in and able to participate in the Decentralization Program.

FILM PROGRAM

The 1985/86 period has marked a time of growth and increased sophistication among both filmmakers and organizations dedicated to film activity. The Film Program, with modest growth in its own budget to a total of $1,895,000, was able to fund 146 organizations to carry out 231 different projects — marking a 30% increase over the previous year. Approximately a quarter of the awards went to organizations applying to the Film Program for the first time.

The Film Program has made film exhibition throughout the State of New York a major priority, with a series of annual developmental trips by staff to a variety of towns and municipalities that have expressed a need for support of their developing exhibition programs. As a result, this year the Film Program has funded two major initiatives aimed at bringing quality programs to the public and improving the ability of local organizations to present films to the widest possible audience. An award of $20,000 enabled the Gallery Association of New York State in Hamilton to tour two outstanding collections of films throughout the State. An award of $40,000 to the Crandall Library in Glens Falls will result in the State's first major conference on film exhibition, combining in-depth workshops in management skills with showcase screenings of important independent films, and providing subsidy monies to ensure attendance by organizations regardless of budget size.

Another major priority for the Film Program has been the development of strengthened and diversified programs in upstate locations. Hallwalls, an alternative gallery in Buffalo received funds to expand its programming and get its new theatre off the ground. The Syracuse Area Landmark Theatre, a restored movie palace, completed a season of film presentations including independent films and filmmakers. The Landmark Theatre received funds to expand its programming for the Syracuse area. In Rochester, the International Museum of Photography (The George Eastman House) received an increase in its funding to acknowledge the change in its film programming and outreach. With NYSCA funding, the Museum was able to mount a major retrospective of black cinema, which included the premiere of a long-lost film by Edgar Ulmer that was recently rediscovered and preserved with NYSCA monies.

The Film Program was able to fund a number of specialized exhibitions of major interest to the field. An award to Exit Art (in New York City) will make possible the presentation of Films With a Purpose, a body of work produced in Puerto Rico in the 1940s that has been unseen for decades despite its influence on the island's filmmakers. An award to the Whitney Museum of American Art made it possible for guest curator Clyde Taylor to present The L.A. Rebellion, a body of work produced by independent black filmmakers in Los Angeles in the 1970s and 1980s. In addition, the Whitney Museum mounted a retrospective of the work of Yvonne Rainer and thus established a new precedent for focusing attention on the work of a filmmaker at the height of her career. In Utica, the Munson-Williams-Proctor Institute turned its attention to film and landscape in a sweeping exhibition that combined gallery installations with evening film screenings and emphasized the work of central New York filmmakers.

Recognizing the need for direction in the growing area of media for children, the Film Program funded the Media Center for Children to provide expertise to organizations involved with showing films to children. In addition, the Media Center for Children presented a conference to assess the impact of new developments such as home video, upon the field of children's media.

Two service organizations that have the individual filmmaker as their mandate celebrated anniversaries this year. The Foundation for Independent Video and Film marked its tenth anniversary with an awards ceremony at the Museum of Modern Art. The Millenium Film Workshop observed its twentieth anniversary with a year-round series of screenings.

Programs aimed at the individual filmmaker expanded this year, as the Film Program sought to ensure support for artists in an increasingly difficult economic climate. Filmmaker residencies were established at two locations: one at Sculpture Space (Utica) and one at the Women's Studio Workshop (Rosendale). In addition, the Film Program carried out the final year of its pilot program in offering distribution funds to films that were originally funded by the Council at some stage of production. Among the films receiving these awards this year were New Yorker Special, a film by Fred Cohen on the making of a master guitar-builder; Diggers, a film by Roman Foster, on the men whose labor built the Panama Canal; and Are We Winning, Mommy?, a film by Barbara Margolis on the history of the cold war.

The Museum of the American Indian expanded its annual festival of films by or about Native Americans with a workshop geared at providing resources for Native American filmmakers.

In 1985/86, the Film Program showed its commitment to the film artists of New York State by increasing the amount of money it awarded for film production to more than $400,000. As the center of independent filmmaking in the United States, New York can be proud of the talent and accomplishments of its filmmakers. Creativity, however, must be nurtured. With this increase, the Film Program was able to fund a total of 31 different film projects. (See the Individual Artists Program for details.) This was the largest number of films funded in a single year in more than a decade. Even more significant was the assessment of significantly improved quality, made by the Film Panel and Council members reviewing these proposals.

In related areas of film acquisition, preservation, distribution, information services, publications, and equipment access, the Film Program has witnessed a period of expansion, growing sophistication, and development, all contributing to the betterment of the art form and the access to quality for the citizens of the State. Film exhibition and production continue to be the two categories in which the Program receives the most applications and in turn spends the most funds. Both have demonstrated increased vitality and resourcefulness. New York State continues to be a model for the support of the individual filmmaker and the expansion of access to the art of film by the broadest range of audiences and communities.

FOLK ARTS PROGRAM

The newest Council program began in 1985/86 with a strong commitment to present, preserve and perpetuate the State's living cultural heritage of the traditional folk arts. The Folk Arts Program's mission centers on the art forms which are the traditional artistic expression of shared ways of life found among all of the State's ethnic, occupational, regional and religious communities. The folk arts are learned informally and practiced in distinctive ways. The folk artists of New York State served by the Program have typically spent years practicing their traditions in families, neighborhoods, and small communities; adapting their art forms over time to new circumstances within the cultural values of their communities.

Many challenges are confronted in a rapidly changing world by folk arts which have been maintained over the years through oral traditions and in face-to-face communication in everyday life. The creation of the Folk Arts Program is helping to insure a vigorous pluralism of cultural expressions in the Empire State. Many new opportunities are being provided for folk artists to practice their traditions and for contemporary audiences to experience the folk arts in a wide variety of settings. Throughout the State, the visibility of traditions is growing and the understanding of the folk arts is deepening through the effects of the Council's funding.

The Folk Arts Program provided funding support of $1,021,770 for a total of 129 projects. The variety of projects supported in the Program's largest category, Presentation, reflects the Program's dual approach of fostering a greater presence for the folk arts both within the communities where traditions originate and for general and multi-ethnic audiences. A grange and other rural settings in Delaware and Otsego counties provided the locations for a series of dances led by senior traditional callers paired with younger callers in a project of the Upper Catskill Community Council on the Arts. The Roberson Center was funded for an exhibition of Eastern European embroideries to include both historical examples from Europe and the works of living Broome County traditional embroiderers. Support was provided to the Society for the Preservation of Weeksville and Bedford Stuyvesant History for a project involving traditional Afro American storytellers to tell narratives relating to their neighborhoods in earlier times. The Adirondack Museum, a major regional history museum, was supported for its summer programs of demonstrations by traditional craftspersons of their region.

The regionalization of folk arts activity throughout the State was a major objective of the Program's first year. Folklorists-in-Residence were supported in a number of regions of the State to undertake program development. The Arts Council for Wyoming County was supported for a folklorist-in-residence to document folk traditions in their region. This folklorist organized a festival, coordinated crafts demonstrations in Letchworth State Park and developed an exhibition to tour Genesee and Wyoming counties. The Arts Council of Rockland County's folklorist-in-residence was involved in an ongoing project to document the county's traditions, develop interpretive programming and coordinate folk arts programs in senior citizens' centers and schools. The Asian American Dance Theatre was supported for a folklorist-in-residence who documented the traditions of New York City's Chinese American community. A folklorist-in-residence position supported at the Arts Council of Freeport is involving the documentation and presentation of occupational and ethnic traditions of the South Shore of Nassau County.

The Folk Arts Program underscored its interest in encouraging regional folk arts projects through a request for proposals for projects of regional or statewide scope and impact. This initiative stimulated organizations to develop projects involving traditions shared beyond boundaries of individual counties or providing services to the folk arts field in a region or the State as a whole. In the Catskills region, the Erpf Catskill Cultural Center was supported to produce a series of slide/tape productions about the verbal arts, music and material folk culture of their region and about folk artists who practice traditions that relate to their interaction with the natural environment. Wayne County Arts in Action was funded to organize an exhibition to travel to four counties about folk arts relating to fishing, hunting and trapping which are found in the Montezuma Marsh region. The Cultural Resources Council of Syracuse and Onondaga County was supported for a workshop, The New York State Folk Arts Roundtable, designed to improve technical skills and strengthen networks among professionals in the folk arts field involved in county and regional folk arts programming.

Through its support of apprenticeships the Folk Arts Program addresses the essential need of master folk artists to perpetuate their traditions through transmitting their skills to other skilled individuals in their communities. A priority for the Apprenticeship category is the support of traditions no longer widely practiced. The range of projects supported through this category is as broad as the State is culturally diverse. Apprenticeship awards including funding to the Association for Hispanic Arts for Afro-Cuban sacred and secular drumming, the New York State Old Tyme Fiddlers Association for Central New York State fiddling traditions, the Akwesasne Cultural Center for Iroquois song and oratory and the Staten Island Institute for Arts and Sciences for Sicilian marionette theatre.

Support for recordings by the Folk Arts Program will make possible the production of phonograph records of musics which receive limited commercial exposure. Council support makes possible the issuance of extensive liner notes or brochures of Italian folk music from the Niagara Frontier region. Cultural Research and Communication was funded to produce a record album on Afro-Cuban music in Cuba and New York.

In awarding support for film and media documentary productions, the Program carefully considered several factors in evaluating applications; including expertise about the tradition which was the subject of the work, skill in the use of the documentary medium and involvement within the production process of the community represented in the production. The New York Foundation for the Arts received funding for One Hand Don't Clap, about the Calypso tradition in the Caribbean and New York. The Ethnic Folk Arts Center was supported to produce audio documentaries on Greek traditional musicians Pericles Halkias and Ilias Kementzides. Afro American folk traditions are the focus of a series of video productions for which support was provided to the Queens Council on the Arts.

Throughout the year the Folk Arts Program maintained an active dialogue with its growing constituency. Regional meetings were held in Auburn, Buffalo, New York City and Troy to explore directions in the Program and discuss the concerns of the field.

INDIVIDUAL ARTISTS PROGRAM

Support for the work of the creative artist is an integral component of the Council's comprehensive approach to its mandate. This support is provided by several Council programs through a variety of means including residencies, subsidy of technical facilities and workspaces, and commissions awards, along with institutional support that creates venues for public experience of the artist's work.

With the objective of creating a structure to interact with the individual artist constituency, the Council created the Individual Artists Program in 1984/85. The program centralized the administration and development of funding categories in five Council programs that offer support for the creation of new works in film, video, audio, visual arts, music and theatre.

In the Council's funding categories of Film Production, Media Production and Visual Artists Sponsored Projects, artists request Council support for their projects through the sponsorship of a nonprofit organization. Usually the artist's project is unrelated to the ongoing program of the sponsoring organization.

In the categories of Music and Theatre Commissions, the request for support comes from the organization, usually a theatre company or ensemble, that plans to perform or present the new work as part of its season.

All requests in these categories are reviewed on a competitive basis by the respective Council discipline program's panel.

During 1985/86, the Individual Artists Program administered a total of $1,047,948 in support of 160 projects that reflect the energy and diversity of artistic activity in New York State. A complete list of artists, projects funded and sponsoring organizations appears on pages 162-169. An overview of the five funding categories handled by the Individual Artists Program follows:

This year the Council increased its commitment to film production by 13% to $399,200. Awards were made for 31 projects encompassing a broad range of styles and approaches to the medium, and reflects support for filmmakers at various stages in their careers. Animation, experimental, documentary and narrative film is represented. Awards ranged from $20,000 to Sheila McLaughlin for a new dramatic feature, to $7,000 for a documentary short by Kyle Kibbee examining the uses of historical events in corporate advertising. Other awards were made to Leslie Thornton and Alan Berliner for experimental work; to Philippe Browning for his first dramatic feature; and to three animators — Robert Breer, Jane Aaron and Ayoka Chenzira — for new work. The awards made for Film Production represent 21% of the Film Program's total allocation.

Media Production encompasses support for video and audio projects. This year the allocation for production support was increased to $360,000 for 40 productions and three cross-disciplinary Media Collaborations. The awards include projects reflecting diverse technologies and aesthetic concerns: video projects involving image processing and interactive systems; video and audio works for installation and exhibition in a variety of formats and genres; dramatic; musical; experimental and documentary works for radio broadcast and multi-media installations. Both emerging and more established artists are represented. Linda Gibson received her first NYSCA award for a video art piece exploring the issue of patriotism and identity from the perspective of a contemporary Black American; 1986 Governor's Arts Award winner Nam June Paik received support for a unique portrait of the seminal Living Theatre group; Liz Phillips is designing a series of "table top-sized" audio installations featuring a custom interactive computer system. Paper Tiger Television, a cable series; and Airworks, a nationally broadcast radio series featuring specially commissioned works by audio artists received continued support.

Funding for Visual Artists' Sponsored Projects increased by 33% to $140,000. The amount represents awards of up to $10,000 covering all direct costs of fifteen projects. This year emphasis was placed on projects that have the potential for contributing to significant development in the work of the artist. Examples include an award to painter Juan Sanchez to learn printing techniques which will enable him to produce high quality reproductions of his work for portfolio; to fiber artist Libby Kowalski for her first large-scale weaving for installation; and to performance artist Lenora Champagne for a multi-media collaboration.

For 1985/86 the Council increased its support for composers' commissions by 38% for a total of $121,485. Funds were distributed by 57 organizations on behalf of 78 composers. This year a wide variety of musical styles were represented including orchestral, chamber, operatic, and jazz. In addition, the Council supported opportunities for composers to work on film and dance scores and a multi-media installation. All of the commissioned works are guaranteed performance by the sponsoring organization.

Funding for Theatre Commissions is intended to encourage the creation of new work that provides an opportunity for artistic enrichment and development for both the individual theatre artist and the commissioning company. This year commissions were awarded to ten theatres for a total of $47,000. These grants will be used to support fees for playwrights, translators, guest directors and designers.

LITERATURE PROGRAM

In 1985/86, the Literature Program introduced two new areas of support: Staged Readings and Editors' Awards, which represent an expansion of an already broad-based approach to funding literary artists and increasing the awareness and appreciation of literature across the State. In the Staged Readings category $53,300 was awarded to 26 organizations with reading series designed to further the development of playwrights. A total of $35,000 was awarded to seven editors for their exemplary work with alternative presses and literary magazines. These new awards address the extensive needs of magazines, presses and playwrights in an entirely fresh way.

Translation, a new category three years ago, continues to attract requests for funding of a large number of exciting projects. This year the Program awarded $41,200 for translation of works from languages that included Spanish, French, Chinese and Yiddish. These translation projects included new work for publication as well as plays for theatrical production.

With the Literature Program's outreach to organizations and local arts councils from the Capital District to the Niagara Frontier, the Program has been able to reach all 62 counties of the State. As reading series come of age in cities such as Buffalo, Glens Falls, Ithaca and Troy as well as the five boroughs, they have developed more consistent attendance for local and more established writers. Organizations such as Hallwalls in Buffalo and Ithaca Community Poets are now able to attract capacity audiences regularly.

Direct support of writing workshops, in addition to those underwritten by NYSCA funding through Poets & Writers, has encouraged a strong network of professional-level training for local writers in a variety of communities including Long Island at Walt Whitman House, in Queens at Woodside on the Move, the Arts Council of Orange County and the Spanish-English Ensemble Theatre in Manhattan.

Outreach to a diverse group of organizations has yielded a significant number of residencies for minority writers. They include Pedro Pietri in residence in Buffalo, Tato Laviera in the Bronx, Colette Inez in Erie County, Julio Marzan in Rockland County, J.E. Franklin in Harlem and Bill Gee in New York's Chinatown. These residencies represent not only support of the individual artists but also the introduction of writers into new communities which can benefit from their literary expertise. A complete list of writers supported for residencies appears under Support for the Individual Artist on page 167. The number and variety of programs sponsored by public library systems for their communities continue to grow. They are exemplified by the Crandall Library residency of David Dwyer, its reading series and its popular storytelling program. Other local libraries that have been literary sponsors are the Upper Hudson Library Federation, the Schenectady Public Library, Old Forge Library and the Library Action Committee of Corona.

The Literature Program continues to address the needs of organizations with special events or projects and literary service organizations through a number of categories. Council support for the New York Book Fair, the Latin American Book Fair and the PEN International Congress has, in effect, reached not just those organizations but thousands of New Yorkers and New York visitors. The Program also provided support for a number of regional newsletters and service-oriented organizations such as the Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines, Greenfield Review Literary Center in Saratoga Springs, the New York State Literary Center in Monroe County and Writers & Books in Rochester. These groups and their newsletters provide a much needed exchange of information and services for the literary community Statewide.

The Program's attention to the development of literary interest in younger people remains a high priority. Awards to organizations placing writers and poets in public schools remain a significant portion of the Program's budget. Primary funding goes to Poets in Public Service, Alternative Literary Programs, Teachers & Writers Collaborative and the Touchstone Center which all emphasize placing working writers with innovative approaches to introducing children to the literary arts.

While the Literature Program continues to reach all 62 counties of the State, primarily through the support of readings and workshops sponsored by Poets & Writers, Writers' Appearances continues to be one of the categories receiving the highest percentage of requests. Through the creative programming of groups like the Hudson Valley Writers' Guild, the Writer's Voice at the West Side YMCA, and the Ollantay Center for the Arts, residents of all parts of the State can be assured of hearing the work of their favorite writers as well as having the opportunity to discover new voices.

Another method of supporting individual writers has been the awards to writers' workspace. In New York City, the Writers' Room and the Mercantile Library and—in New York State—colonies like Millay and Yaddo provide writers with two premium commodities that are always in short supply: time and space to write.

The Literature Program remains a principal source of support for alternative presses and magazines. $185,950 was awarded to 46 presses and magazines which receive critical attention nationwide and provide a forum for New York State writers.

The Literature Program is addressing a range of complex needs of the State's growing literary community. Multi-year funding in some categories has allowed organizations to plan long-range programs and focus on administrative development. The encouraging attendance at book fairs, readings and workshops; the renewed commitments to widening the distribution of alternative press publications; and the fresh interest of libraries and other community organizations in becoming literary sponsors insures the continued expansion of this State's literary reputation.

LOCAL ARTS ORGANIZATIONS/SERVICE ORGANIZATIONS PROGRAM

The Local Arts Organizations/Service Organizations Program (ASO) celebrated the New York State Council on the Arts' 25th Anniversary with a revitalized commitment to the long term development of cultural life in New York State. In this landmark year, the program pursued this goal through vigorous institutional support to its primary constituents—local arts councils, multi-disciplinary service organizations, and multi-arts centers, and through the introduction of new and entrepreneurial funding categories designed to address the changing landscape of the arts and arts organizations in New York State. In 1985/86 a total of $4,000,000 was awarded to 112 organizations throughout the state. Grants ranged in size from a first time award of $1,000 for a unique community arts festival on the Lower East Side of New York City to the Council's largest allocation to date to support creative artists throughout the state, a $1.3 million award for the New York State Fellowship Program.

Artistic and organizational development are apparent in all segments of the ASO constituency. Local arts councils, which now reach into all of the State's 62 counties, continue to sharpen the focus of the cultural services provided to individual artists, cultural organizations and the general public. In 1985/86, arts councils increasingly expanded into new artistic and programmatic areas including folk arts, literature, visual arts, film, the performing arts, arts and education as well as the sponsorship of artist-initiated projects through the Council's Individual Artists Program.

Additionally, community based multi-arts centers have added a new dimension to the cultural scene in the State. The centers are vivid demonstrations of the creativity and determination of local residents who are committed to providing a forum for the arts within their communities. Many of these organizations gathered in Blue Mountain Lake in the Fall of 1986 for the first New York State Rural Arts Organizations Conference, supported by the Program. The gathering focused on the special characteristics and needs of these organizations, relating to marketing, fundraising, cooperative programming and the potential for earned income.

As the nonprofit arts community expands and matures, increased demands are placed upon service organizations to forecast future trends and to design specific programs to ensure the viability of arts organizations throughout the State, thus assuring New York's cultural preeminence in the nation. This past year ongoing services included the provision of graphic design and poster printing, publishing services, the investigation of health hazards in the arts community, insurance programs for individual artists, legal aid to small arts organizations and individual artists. Additionally, these organizations focused special programs on pressing issues in the arts community. The Space Chase conference instructed nonprofit arts organizations on how to find and finance administrative, rehearsal, exhibition and performance space; Getting in Touch with Video highlighted the increasing use of video in the presentation of all of the creative arts; and Creative Solutions for the Creative Artist conference offered information on support systems for the individual artist.

In 1985/86, financial bedrock continued to be provided to a large and important segment of the ASO constituency through General Operating Support. $2,162,335 was awarded to 65 organizations in this category. Additionally, with this year's broad offer of multi-year support, the Council further acknowledged the maturity of ASO constituents while greatly enhancing their efforts toward institutional stability. This funding allowed established organizations to apply at the beginning of one funding year for two consecutive years at a consistent level of support. Twenty-seven General Operating Support recipients received multi-year grants ranging from $16,500 awarded to an rural county arts council in the Catskills to awards of $123,000 to two major urban arts councils. Multi-year support was available in the Services to the Field category as well and three organizations received such support.

In a further attempt to enhance institutional stability through developmental efforts, the ASO program introduced two new categories of support: Professional Consultants and Institutional Advancement. The Professional Consultant category, designed to help organizations acquire new skills and knowledge through short term consultancies, was greeted enthusiastically by the ASO constituency. In this first year, twelve organizations received grants averaging $1,800 in order to work on a wide range of issues. Some consultancies focused on familiar but nonetheless critical organizational concerns including short- and long-range planning, board development, and public relations. Other consultancies were tailored uniquely to address less traditional issues including the development of comprehensive minority arts programming linked to the opening of a renovated theatre in a small upstate city, programming for a computer donated to a rural arts organization and training for staff, and the revamping of overburdened financial systems for a service organization whose budget had tripled in the past few years.

An Institutional Advancement category was introduced in 1985/86 in order to provide established organizations, distinguished in programming and services, with a unique opportunity to attain long-term goals. This type of "investment" support has become essential as mature organizations seek to maintain preeminent positions as cultural resources in the State despite increasing demands imposed by changing artistic and economic environments and growing constituencies. Two first-year grants of $20,000 were awarded to organizations poised to undertake major institutional steps toward future financial stability while enhancing current program and service delivery to constituents. Jamaica Arts Center's program will allow the organization to realize significant long-range goals linked to its community's ethnically diverse and expanding population as well as the area's economic revitalization. Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts' three year plan calls for the strengthening and expansion of legal services and educational programs brought about by the increasing demands placed upon the organization by individual artists and cultural organizations. Over the span of this special three year support category, participating organizations will be required to match Council funds on a two-to-one basis.

The emphasis on organizational stability did not detract from ASO's continuing involvement with newly formed organizations, first time applicants to the program, (eleven such organizations were funded in 1985/86 for a total of $43,750), and new initiatives for all arts organizations on behalf of the Council. During 1985/86, the ASO program spearheaded the Council's Marketing Training Initiative. In the first year of the program the Council awarded a total of $162,000 to eight organizations to train cultural organizations and individual artists in effective marketing techniques. The projects supported were unique in their collaborative spirit as established cultural institutions designed training programs for their developing counterparts. The grantees are from throughout New York State and represent a wide variety of artistic disciplines including dance, film, media, literature and theatre.

Direct beneficiaries of the individual programs are drawn from those disciplines and also include minority organizations, museums, historical societies and regional cultural organizations.

LOCAL INCENTIVE FUNDING TEST/LIFT PROGRAM

The Council initiated the Local Incentive Funding Test/LIFT in 1983/84 to encourage county governments to play an integral role in the delivery of arts programs and services to the citizens of their counties. The goal of LIFT is to encourage increased financial support of the arts at the county level by using State funds through NYSCA to leverage new county and local dollars. The LIFT Program also encourages cooperation and collaboration between local arts organizations within each county and their respective county government. LIFT funds are offering new opportunities for local counties to reach areas and communities not previously served.

To qualify for LIFT funds, counties are required to develop and submit an application to NYSCA outlining how the county plans to accomplish its goals and address its cultural priorities. Counties funded by LIFT are required to match State funds. Two State dollars from the Council have to be matched by three local dollars. A minimum of 60% of each local dollar must come from the county budget. The remaining 40% of each local dollar can be solicited from private sources.

The growth of the LIFT Program over the past three years indicates local matching money is significantly increasing. In 1983/84 the Council awarded $96,566 of LIFT funds towards a local match of $144,850. In 1985/86 the Council awarded $103,000 towards a local match of $154,500.

Twenty-two counties submitted applications requesting a total of $147,489. Twenty counties were awarded funds, sixteen of which were third-year recipients. The LIFT county awards ranged from $1,000 to $15,000.

MEDIA PROGRAM

Since the New York State Council on the Arts created the Media Program in 1970, it has played a paramount role in the field of video and audio art. During fiscal year 1985/86, the Program renewed its commitment to lead and operated with the following assumptions and objectives: 1) the field is expanding but it is far from being "established" securely—it is fraught with complex questions including those caused by rapidly developing technology and distribution/marketing problems; 2) it is vital that we seek shared leadership with the field; 3) the program should address the question of balance between support for the larger, established and the smaller, developing organizations; and 4) the Council should assist individual artists, both established and emerging, to create new works.

In 1985/86, the Media Program awarded a total of $1,380,000 to 107 organizations for 160 projects, including 40 Production and 3 Media Collaboration awards. Continuing to express the fundamental conviction that production is vital for the field, the Program expended $360,000, 26% of its total allocation, for production of individual artists' works through sponsoring organizations. The awards ranged from $3,000 to Suzanne Frew to produce a video documentary, Beneath the Safety Net, that deals with the deinstitutionalization of the mentally ill in Rochester to a grant of $22,000 to Ed Bowes toward the first episode of an eight-part television series (narrative). A complete list of production awards appears on pages 165-166.

The Program continued its support of Exhibition (25% of the total budget); projects designed for Services to the Field, including distribution (18%); Production and Post-Production Services (6%); Artist-in-Residence and Workspace programs (6%). The Program awarded grants to six writers, ranging from $1,000 to $3,500, under the category of Writing on Media Art, which is designed to encourage critical writing on media art. A grant of $3,500 went to Amy Taubin to write a book tentatively entitled, Mixed Signals: The Noncomplementary Independent and Television.

Mindful of the assumptions and objectives discussed above, the Program carried out several special projects. In addition to its on-going grant making to minority organizations, projects, and artists, the Program issued a Request for Proposals to address the issue of systematic strengthening of minority participation in the Media Field.

As a result, $20,000 was awarded to the joint application from the Film News Now Foundation and the Third World Newsreel for a minority development project.

During the fiscal year of 1985/86, the staff did extensive development work upstate through town meetings, site visits and talking with potential applicants. In the process of this work, it became apparent to us that the need to develop equipment access centers upstate, especially ¾" editing systems, was acute. Consequently, the Program combined its efforts for upstate development and equipment projects and provided support for the following new projects: exhibition of audience interactive electronic arts works, Arnot Museum, Elmira ($2,500); Western New York Videomakers Forum, Center for Exploratory and Perceptual Arts, Buffalo ($1,000); and equipment purchases at Hallwalls, Buffalo ($12,000), Visual Studies Workshop, Rochester ($7,500) and Experimental Television Center, Owego ($5,000). In addition, a new grant of $4,500 was awarded to the Bronx Museum of the Arts to install a VHS video editing system in order to serve students as well as Bronx based artists who come to its NYSCA-supported video workshop.

In the context of seeking shared leadership with the field, the Program supported Channel Thirteen's New Television I and II. This partnership with WNET promises to be a beginning of a new era in that the nation's major public television station is once again, since the demise of the TV Lab, committing itself to producing and showing independent video works. Another example of advancing shared leadership with the field can be seen in the Council's support of regrant programs. Regrant is an excellent means of broadening production resources and inviting institutions to make a commitment to helping artists raise funds, because it requires a dollar for dollar match. During 1985/86, the Media Program awarded two grants—one to the Film Fund for $17,500, and one to the Checkerboard Foundation for $12,000. This represents twice the amount of support awarded in this category the previous year.

Finally, a grant of $10,000 was awarded to the Whitney Museum to conduct research addressing the questions and issues arising from the new forms of technology and their impact upon the creation, dissemination, and access to various arts disciplines. This project is consistent with the Council's effort to provide leadership in serving artists and arts organizations.

MUSEUM AID PROGRAM

Throughout its 20 year history, the Museum Aid Program has sought to respond to the diverse needs of New York State's equally diverse museum community—from small community-based and regional historical societies to some of the world's largest museums housing comprehensive, internationally-known collections of the fine and decorative arts. Currently, the Program offers organizational support in three categories and project support in thirteen categories to art, history, science and general museums, children's museums, service organizations and non-museums providing a broad range of museum-type programs. Through its funding process, the Museum Aid Program is committed to encouraging high-quality interpretive exhibitions, effective educational programming, broad community access, well-planned collections care and documentation efforts, professional development of organizations and interns, widely available services to the field, and institutional stability with administrative excellence.

During its history, the Program has helped to shape, and has been shaped by, its field. Strongly committed to close communication with its applicants, it was the first Council program to emphasize the on-site visit to constituents, and it currently visits for review almost 80% of its applicants throughout the State. As the first Council program to utilize a panel of professionals from the field to review its applications, the Program has continued to stress peer review by a well-balanced panel, comprising scholars and museum professionals representing its constituent's broad disciplines, geographic regions, ethnic diversity, and organizational sizes. Five times each year, these dedicated panelists, supplemented by "extended" panelists with special knowledge of the curatorial or conservation fields, convene for close analysis of the hundreds of requests that the Program receives each year.

In addition, the Program has been a leader in the field in aiding the establishment and ongoing development of regional and Statewide museum service organizations, including the Gallery Association of New York State, the Regional Conference of Historical Agencies, the Federation of Historical Services, the Lower Hudson Conference, and the newest of these founded in 1985, the Western New York Association of Historical Agencies. These organizations, among the first of their kind in the nation, provide much needed, highly beneficial technical and information services to principally small and mid-sized institutions in virtually every region of the State. Along with the Council-funded conservation consultancy programs offered by the New York State Conservation Consultancy and the Textile Conservation Workshop, these service organizations extend the Program's philosophy and practice of working closely and developmentally with its widely dispersed constituents. In 1985/86, service organizations were awarded a total of $454,777, or almost 7% of the Program's total allocation.

In early 1986, the Program also collaborated with the Rensselaer County Historical Society in direct sponsorship of a workshop on the Stewardship of Historic Houses. The workshops, designed to present current information on the care and interpretation of historic houses, brought together curators, educators, trustees and directors representing one of the Program's many constituencies to four Statewide locations—Yonkers, Troy, Cortland and Buffalo. Museum directors and curators, conservators, museum consultants and directors of museum service organizations also met earlier in the year with Program staff to discuss issues relating to collections care and conservation in New York State museums. These representatives called for continuing high levels of funding support for care, conservation and documentation projects and continued educational efforts on behalf of such vital, high priority activities. Workshops and meetings such as these represent the Program's ongoing efforts to identify and respond to important issues in the museum field.

In 1985/86, 185 organizations Statewide shared the Program's total allocation of $6,525,000, a $125,000 increase in Program funding over the previous year. Of this amount, $4,464,882, or 68.8% of the full allocation, was awarded to 66 organizations for General Operating Support. In recognition of significant qualitative gains in such critical areas as collections care, programming and community access and support, eight organizations were awarded General Operating Support for the first time. This group consisted of the Chemung County Historical Society, (Elmira), the Delaware County Historical Association, (Delhi), Dewitt Historical Society of Tompkins County, (Ithaca), the East Hampton Historical Society, (East Hampton), Guild Hall of East Hampton, (East Hampton), Hanford Mills Museum, (East Meredith), the Huntington Historical Society, (Huntington), and the National Academy of Design, (Manhattan).

Approximately 30% of the Program's allocation was disbursed in thirteen Project Support categories, including the newly established category of Planning for Museum Education and Interpretation. In this latter category, initiated to encourage careful program planning and the development of imaginative new programs, seventeen organizations were awarded a total of $97,971. These included the Museums at Stony Brook, for the development of educational programs and interpretive materials designed to broaden the public's understanding of the history of the horse-drawn era, in conjunction with Stony Brook's new Carriage Museum. The Erie Canal Museum, Syracuse, received funding for planning and evaluating educational programs for newly installed exhibition areas in the Museum's Weighlock Building.

Eleven projects were funded under the category of Interpreting the 20th Century, designed to encourage museums to address recent historical and environmental issues. Funding was awarded to the Buffalo and Erie County Historical Society for research, exhibition and a catalogue which will explore youth culture in Buffalo in the 1940's and 1950's. The International Center of Photography (Manhattan) received funding for a major research project on the history, development and social impact of photojournalism and documentary photography.

Ten organizations received funding under the Local History and Folklife Documentation category, which is intended to encourage organizations to examine and document people in their communities whose lives, traditions and history have gone largely unstudied and unrecorded. Among these organizations were the Arts Council of Rockland, for research, and an exhibition on the local Jewish Community, and the East End Arts and Humanities Council in Riverhead, for oral history and photographic documentation of the area's black community.

Fifteen awards totalling $139,700 were made to twelve organizations in another "special concern" category, Exhibitions of Works by Living American Artists. Notable among these were two awards to the Albright-Knox/Buffalo Fine Arts Academy for exhibitions of works by Jacob Lawrence and Beverly Pepper, and to the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum for a retrospective exhibition of works by Jack Youngerman.

In the Individual Exhibition category, $588,690 was awarded for 73 projects, including an exhibition on Dutch Arts and Culture in Colonial America to the Albany Institute of History and Art, and an exhibition on the fine art of the book—Beyond Words—to the Memorial Art Gallery (Rochester).

Reflecting the increased museum-wide awareness of the need for professional levels of collection care and conservation, Program funding in the Conservation category was increased from $121,367 in 1984/85 to $204,382 in 1985/86. Funding in this important category supports treatment of specific works of art or artifacts in various media, surveys of collections prior to conservation treatment, or collection storage improvement activities. Fifty-five awards were made to a diverse group of museums, including the New-York Historical Society, the Parrish Art Museum (Southampton) and the Onondaga County Parks Department's Salt Museum (Liverpool). The Ukrainian Museum (Manhattan) received funding to upgrade storage conditions for its textile and photography collections, and the Woodstock Artists Association was awarded funding for treatment of five paintings, soon to be featured in a catalogue of the organization's permanent collection of works by that art colony's early artists.

Through its funding in both organizational and project support categories, the Museum Aid Program seeks to provide a level of institutional financial stability, while encouraging professional development, new ideas and fresh initiatives in the field. Its reputation and its accomplishments as a funding program are premised on its continued sensitivity and responsiveness to an ever-developing museum community.

MUSIC PROGRAM

Despite the vitality and diversity of our State's musical activity, musicians and musical institutions still struggle to build and maintain audiences and to sustain support in a highly competitive marketplace. The Music Program is committed to securing and nurturing the health of this community. In 1985/86, a total of $6,000,000 (a $145,000 increase over 1984/85) was awarded to 298 organizations in 62 counties. Grants ranged from $500 to $775,000 and were awarded to a variety of groups, including orchestras, opera companies, jazz, chamber music, early and contemporary music, choral groups, service organizations and publications. Funds were also awarded for the support of administrative needs; commissions and recordings. In addition to grants in its funding categories, support was provided through special programs. Among them were the second New York State New Music Network, the Pocket Orchestra Project, and the Musical Instrument Revolving Fund.

During 1985/86, nearly 90% of the Music Program budget was awarded in two major areas: General Operating Support for $2,996,660 (49.9% of the Program's allocation) and Professional Performances—Home Base and Touring (39.7% of the Program's allocation). These categories represent the core of support of all organizational types and continue to be the Program's first priority. Multi-year funding, in its second year of implementation, was awarded to two groups, bringing to a total of 13 (at $1,861,000) the number of organizations utilizing this kind of extended funding.

Offering support for Recordings and Commissions is the most direct way available to the Music Program to further the creation, documentation and dissemination of the music of our time. In 1985/86, 65 awards were made in the Commissions category, totalling $121,485. An increase of 33% over the previous year, these awards were given in support of a wide variety of new work including chamber, orchestral, opera, dance, theatrical and film scores, all of which are guaranteed performance by the commissioning organization. A total of $73,000 was awarded in the category of Recordings, both directly to nonprofit recording companies and to groups doing independent recording projects. Service organizations, a small but increasingly valuable part of the Program's constituency, received $298,500 in 1985/86, with major grants in this category to regranting organizations such as Meet the Composer.

Recognizing the importance of both new activity and fresh initiatives in the music field, the Music Program has responded through awards to groups new to the Program (67 in 1985/86) and through special projects. In the Fall of 1985, the second New York State New Music Network toured nine outstanding new music groups through five communities around the State. The goals of the Network — to present a wide variety of current music-making; to provide repeat performances of new works; to open new performance spaces for contemporary music; and to develop new audiences — continue to be of great importance. It is hoped that a third tour, scheduled for Fall of 1987, will have helped establish a network of performers and sponsors which will become a part of the independent musical life of the State.

The Pocket Orchestra Project, an innovative program co-founded by the Council and the Mary Flagler Cary Charitable Trust, began in 1985/86. Established to provide funds for small dance, opera and musical theater companies to hire live musicians for performances, the Pocket Orchestra Project awarded $100,130 in grants — nine to opera and six to dance companies throughout the State. The number of applications to the program in its first year far exceeded the amount of funding available. This confirmed the Program's commitment to strengthening and continuing a project which addresses an artistic need and the need of free-lance players and young conductors to be able to work with existing organizations.

Two years ago, the Musical Instrument Revolving Fund was created to stimulate the professional growth of musicians and ensembles by making musical instruments available to nonprofit organizations that are in need of such instruments. The project makes loans for the purchase of instruments available at a low annual finance charge over an extended period. Administered through the Theatre Development Fund, the Musical Instrument Revolving Fund will again be offered in 1986/87, and directed toward chamber orchestras and music presenters.

Although the musical life of New York State continues to grow and flourish, this life has a fragile and volatile nature. The Music Program realizes this and, through traditional funding categories, special projects, and new initiatives, seeks to respond with the creativity and imagination exhibited by those it supports.

PRESENTING ORGANIZATIONS PROGRAM

The Presenting Organizations Program provides support to a wide variety of organizations committed to the presentation of quality performing arts programming in their communities. Ranging from internationally distinguished institutions to small volunteer organizations that are crucial to their community's cultural life, the organizations supported by the Presenting Organizations Program include presenters, cultural centers, dance, music and theatre producers, museums, historical societies, arts councils, ethnic, educational, religious and visual arts organizations, libraries and municipalities.

In 1985/86, a total of $2,325,000 was disbursed to 194 organizations in 56 counties for the presentation of 2,970 performances. This represented an increase of 203 performances over the 1984/85 level with first-time support directed to 18 organizations. Grants ranged from $500 to $305,500 with the majority of the awards between $1,500 and $25,000. As in the past, over three-quarters of the allocation was expended outside Manhattan reflecting the Program's commitment to providing all New York State residents with accessibility to the finest of the performing arts. In addition, a $50,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts (Dance/Inter-arts/State Programs Presenting/Touring Initiative) was awarded to 24 organizations for the presentation of out-of-state dance and mime companies and the Harlem Cultural Council's upstate Dancemobile performances.

The focus of the Presenting Organizations Program continued to be on the sustenance and development of the presenting field in both programmatic and managerial areas. Priority support was given to those organizations that incorporated into their seasons the presentation of lesser known artists, and attempted unique programming concepts which posed higher financial risks.

Presentation, New Presenter Development and General Operating Support represented the largest areas of support, for the costs of presentation, a total of $2,228,785. General Operating Support provides unrestricted support for ongoing institutional activities to those organizations whose primary mission is concentrated in the presenting field. In the incentive categories of Commissions, Incentive Programming, Services to the Field, Administrative Salaries and Consultants, the Program expended $96,215. The first three categories aim to stimulate the presentation of contemporary work by living artists while the last two aim to strengthen an organization's management and presenting skills.

Two new initiatives were undertaken by the Presenting Organizations Program in 1985/86 to stimulate the presentation of non-traditional, experimental, and avant-garde performing arts work throughout the State.

The first initiative was a three-day showcase/conference for presenters produced in association with the New York Foundation for the Arts with a grant to the New York State Council on the Arts from the National Endowment for the Arts. Entitled New Works: New Audiences, the conference was designed to acquaint presenters with the work of some of the leading performing artists in the contemporary field and to introduce presenters to specialized skills associated with "living art". A total of thirteen artists/ensembles were showcased to 175 presenters representing 127 organizations. Discussions focused on areas of marketing and fundraising for the presentation of such work, as well as on the exploration of new presenting opportunities in alternative spaces and on problems faced by managers and board members when presenting what might be considered "high risk" programming.

The second new initiative was the Incentive Programming category, developed to encourage the presentation of new works by presenters outside the five boroughs of New York City, who have a history of programming traditional work within a subscription series. In this pilot year, five organizations were selected to receive bonus half-week residencies by contemporary artists. The selected organizations were Chautauqua County Council on the Arts, Chemung County Performing Arts, Council on the Arts for Clinton County, Friends of the Bay Shore-Brightwaters Public Library, and QRS Foundation. The artists selected by the presenters were the Amherst Saxophone Quartet, David Cale, Blondell Cummings, and Edmund Niemann with Nurit Tilles.

Ten organizations received support for 19 commissions through the incentive category Commissions, a category aimed at fostering the creation and presentation of new work by living artists as well as answering presenters' needs for more innovative programming. Commissioned artists included Margaret Jenkins, Nina Wiener, Ellen Taaffe Zwilich, Dianne Gallo, Bebe Miller, Pat Graney, Liz Lerman, Muna Tseng, Omoye Cooper, Dexter Morrill, Carlton Clay, Abdul Salaam, Fred Benjamin, Horace Arnold, and a collaborative work by Jerri Allyn, Bill Gordh, Joe Lowery, Frank South, and Debra Wanner.

Seventeen organizations in their first or second year of presenting activity received support through the New Presenter Development category in the counties of Delaware, Greene, Herkimer, Livingston, Oneida, Otsego, Queens, Steuben, Tompkins, Ulster, Warren, Wayne and Westchester. This category encourages the emergence and development of new presenters in those regions of the State where there is a scarcity of performing arts activity and/or a lack of a particular art form. Presentations by these new presenters included performances by Paul Zaloom, Split Britches, Spalding Gray, Pooh Kaye, Kenny Burrell, Dana Reitz, Sachiyo Ito and Company, Charles Moore Dance Company, Mitchell Korn, Billy Taylor, and Das Puppenspiel.

Some of the highlights of the programming year included the Next Wave Festival as well as the American premiere of the Central Ballet of China at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Art on the Beach and Art in the Anchorage by Creative Time, Dancing and Soundings, a series of dance and music performances on the Staten Island Ferry by the Staten Island Council on the Arts, the Jewish Arts Festival by the United Jewish Ys of Long Island, the New York City Ballet, Circle Repertory and Jose Limon performances at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center, the Interarts Festival by Bond Street Coalition, the Jazz Festival by Lake George Regional Arts Project, the three day festival of traditional American folk songs and dances by Old Songs, and Avant-garde-arama by PS 122.

SPECIAL ARTS SERVICES PROGRAM

The Special Arts Services Program awarded $3,465,000 to 230 organizations in various disciplines. Support from this program enabled minority/ethnic artists, administrators, and organizations to achieve their goals, and make significant contributions to the artistic resources of New York State.

In 1985/86, Multi-year support was offered by the Special Arts Services Program for the first time. Multi-year support is available to organizations that have a history of providing excellent programming and a commitment to this program's constituency. One of the major benefits of Multi-year support is that it enables organizations to plan their activities over a two-year period, and be assured of a relatively stable level of support. Fifteen organizations received Multi-year support for a total of $450,969.

Highlighting Special Arts Services initiatives in 1985/86 was a new funding category, Institutional Advancement. Institutional Advancement is designed for the purpose of assisting minority/ethnic organizations to address specific administrative or artistic concerns or to implement a new program which is vital to its development. This is a competitive category which means that because available funds are limited, only the best proposals are selected. This year six organizations received a total

The balance of the Program's allocation — approximately one third of the total — was awarded toward support of 83 single exhibitions and/or exhibition programs ($389,461) and sixteen publications ($68,700).

Both the Exhibitions and Publications categories can be considered primary means through which critical discourse on contemporary trends in the visual arts is encouraged by the Program. As in the past, some exciting and challenging shows were proposed and supported: an exchange between U.S. and Brazilian women artists organized by Central Hall Artists (Manhattan); a ten-year retrospective of photography exhibited by En Foco at the Bronx Museum of the Arts; a one-person exhibition of ceramic sculptor Graham Marks' work at the Everson Museum in Syracuse; a contemporary Korean painting/sculpture show at the Thorpe Inter-media Gallery (Sparkill); a series of site-specific drawings at the Hillwood Art Gallery, C.W. Post College (Greenvale); an iron sculpture show inside the Soldiers and Sailors Monument at Grand Army Plaza (Brooklyn); and The Architecture of the Vessel, an exhibition organized by the Rochester Institute of Technology, exploring the influence of the vessel form on contemporary, non-functional glass and clay works.

In addition to exhibition support, which often included support for accompanying catalogues, the Program funded several ongoing journals which provide timely coverage of developments in the field and which address issues of concern to the contemporary visual arts. To name a few, Real Life magazine, October, Bomb, and Aperture were funded this year.

All told, through the above categories, the Program contributed to the ever changing cultural variety and continued experimentation in the contemporary arts.

Primary List

In compliance with a legislative mandate that at least 50% of the Council's Local Assistance funds be directed to organizations designated as "primary," the Council filed the following list of 165 cultural organizations with the State Division of Budget for 1985-86. Primary institutions are defined as "eligible arts organizations which, by the quality of their arts services, their stature as art institutions on a State or national level, or by the importance of their contribution to a significant population or the arts discipline in which they specialize, are particularly important to the cultural life of New York State, and the loss of which or the diminution of services would, in the opinion of the Council, constitute a serious artistic loss to the people in the State."
